Roe Deer

These shy forest-dwelling creatures are often hard to spot despite their reddish fur and large ears. Constantly alert for any sound they are easily startled, and you may only spot their distinctive white tails as they make their escape from you into the depths of the forest.

Selected Teas

ASSAM BARI Assam, India - Summer

From the Mangalam plantation in the largest tea growing area.

Depending on the brewing time, the tea has a slight cocoa note and develops later a malty sweetness.

SPLENDID EARL GREY Darjeeling, India - Autumn

The typical flowery full-bodiedness of an autumn Darjeeling with the fresh and elegant citrus aroma of bergamot.

DRAGONWELL ZHEJIANG Hangzhou, China - Spring

A Long Jing tea, which is considered the best Chinese green tea!

Its aroma is lovely sweet and is complemented by a distinct chestnut flavor. Even with a long brewing time, this tea does not get bitter.

WHITE YIN LONG Anhui, China - Spring-Summer

White tea is considered the finest type of tea.

This rarity is coming all the way from the mountains of Anhui province, China. You will fall in love with its beautifully soft peach aroma and a lightly tart touch.

Marmot

The marmot is one of the great hibernators and after nine months of sleep awakes in May with a great appetite. Found near its burrow basking in the sun, this large squirrel-like rodent emits a high pitched whistle when disturbed and is often heard before it is seen in places such as Blauherd.
